3000 Hangovers Later
Photo exhibition

August 2-5, 11am-6pm

The Rougher Gallery Archive
Craze Gallery, 253 Portobello Road, W11 1LR

The first major retrospective of Ray Jones' illuminating pictures from the legendary Rougher Magazine, which captured the final flowering of Bohemian Portobello. Recently his portraits of Joe Strummer, Will Self and Damien Hirst, alongside John The Dog, John The Hat and Steve Underground, have been rediscovered. Like Harry Diamond's portraits of 50s Soho, they capture the genius loci of a unique place and time.

Molly Parkin

8-19 August

The Muse Gallery, 269 Portobello Road, London W11

Molly Parkin is best known as a writer and fashion icon. However she famously went bankrupt after several years of drinking at the Colony Club with Francis Bacon and his circle – "if you had a choice of paying your taxes or drinking with Francis what would you do" (see 5 August – Boozing With Bacon at Westbourne Studios). Bacon inspired Molly to take up the paintbrush. Portobello Film Festival is proud to present old and new paintings by Molly, who calls herself a colourist and is represented by Christie Contemporary Art.

Inkie graffiti art

westbourne studios

1-21 August

After getting busted in 1988 in the UK's largest ever graffiti shutdown – codename Operation Anderson – Inkie went on to come second in the World Street Art Championships of 1989. He's continued for the past two decades to push the art in his own inimitable style and ways (alongside Banksy he organized the largest ever UK graffiti event, a 1.4 km painting around the Bristol docks entitled 'Walls On Fire'.

Unconfirmed at time of going to press – we are also hoping to present work by Eine, Joe Rush, Gordon McHarg and Nick Reynolds in the Westbourne atrium space.

1 -22 August Westbourne Grove Church, Westbourne Grove, W11

Over the weekend of the 31st March hundreds of people took to the streets of Portobello for the Shoot Portobello Weekend – a photography treasure hunt event, presented by Rough trade shops and Shoot Experience. Locals and visitors alike took the opportunity to re-discover the streets of Portobello and uncover the hidden musical history of the area by deciphering clues and recording the answers photographically.

Selected photographs from Shoot Portobello Weekend will be exhibited from the 1st to 22nd August at the Westbourne Grove Church, where the event took place. The Church offers the perfect environment in which to display the photos from the event, a wonderful collection of creative, spirited and inspiring photos which capture the unique and eclectic culture of the area. For more information about the event visit www.shootexperience.com.

Snug 1-21 August westbourne studios

Snug has been a free lance graffiti artist & illustrator for 20 years. He trained at Chelsea and Byam Shaw Schools of Art, before taking up aerosol paint as a serious tool for art and design. In the summer of 2004 he was the lead artist on the largest graffiti mural in the British Isles; a community project celebrating the diverse cultures and life of Kilburn situated outside Kilburn Underground station, the 'gateway to London'. In Spring 2005 he completed a 150 square-metre mural at 'Damage' in Trafalgar Street, Brighton. Recently he has finished two commissions for Hugo Boss in their 'orange' stores in Carnaby Street and their head offices in North London.

SNUG has been asked to paint two works depicting the theme 'Magic' for the Portobello Film Festival this year showing in Westbourne Studios. An accomplished artist, he has undertaken corporate works and additionally painted live at private parties, events and music festivals.

Looking For Tomorrow

Portobello Film Festival presents the Gala preview screening of 'Looking For Tomorrow'. A stunning love story about a fourteen year old girl pressured into marrying an older, well-off man, growing resigned to the idea she meets the young Ibrahim, who is in hiding waiting to take a 'Patera' to Spain. Stormy weather delays the voyage and the young people share a fugitive love, dreaming of running away together, before reality intrudes. Filmed in the countryside of Larache, North Morocco which has links with the local area. In Moroccan dialect and starring newcomers Said Bekkeurie and Taouba Noro.

Award winning director Barney Platts-Mills started work in the Shepperton Studios cutting room aged 15. Has written and directed four features, set up Massive Videos, a production company for errant young people from west London and founded the Portobello Film Festival before moving to Morocco.

Estibaliz Burgaleta & Alegria Collantes.
This is the history of three weirdos; Jose Luis belongs to the urban tribe of wrecks, Raul is a frikie of video-games and Eva a fervent follower of astrology. They three are inhabitants of a normal ecosystem that it is to them hostile, and choose three different forms to live their life. And indeed, it is that capacity of choice what makes the human being the weirdest of the nature

London psychogeographer Tom Vague conjures up the magic, mysticism and mythology of Notting Hill's past on a magical mystery tour of Hollywood Babylon W11.

Once upon a time there was a place called Notting Hill Gate, that wasn't inhabited by international bankers and TV executives, where anything could happen and usually did. But, in spite of gentrification and media overkill, some magical vestiges remain and not all the ghosts of the area's weird and wonderful past are banished from the streets.

Notting Hill: The Magical City

"Here magic flourishes, and every-where one can see evidence of a growing devout irrationalism. Little bookshops sell the I-Ching, packs of tarot cards and fat studies of the obscure mathematics of astrology. You can buy Sufi watergongs to aid contemplation and the macrobiotic foodshop on Portobello Road, Ceres, even turns the consumption of vegetables into a mystical religion"

"The people who float on the tide of metaphysical junk - freaks of all kinds" into macrobiotics, yoga, astrology, illiterate mysticism, acid, terrible poetry - have managed, at a price. The new folk magic of the streets promises to have some unhappy political consequences but as a way of responding to the city it does reflect a truth about the nature of the place which we had better learn to confront...

"These people at the Gate have clearly embraced the idea of a magical city. Their clothes, their language, their religious beliefs, their folk art belong to a synthetically-reconstructed tribal culture ruled by superstition, totems and taboos...

"The Gate opens not on to the gentle pot smoking whimsy of Gandalf's Garden, but on a ruined Eden, tangled, exotic and overgrown, where people see signs in scraps of junk and motley. It may look like affectation, a boasting juvenile pretence, but perhaps it is real - a state of natural magic to which the fragmented industrial city unconsciously aspires."

Notting Hill in the hippy days described as a prime example of 'The Magical City' in Jonathan Raban's 1974 'psychological handbook for urban survival', Soft City.

Trojans, Celts and Romans

The area's only real claim to antiquity comes from being on the Celtic west trackway, 3 miles from the probable Celtic settlement that would become London. In Notting Hill in Bygone Days, Florence Gladstone mentions posters on the underground in 1916 which 'stated that Holland Park Avenue was the Via Trinobantia of the Romans, the chief road of the late Celtic kingdom of the Trinobantes.' According to Geoffrey of Monmouth's mythological history, Trinobantia is derived from Troynovant – New Troy.

In 1841 the Gentleman's Magazine reported that workmen excavating the foundations of 67-75 Ladbroke Grove had discovered a stone coffin, containing an adult skeleton and bone and ivory pins. Further finds were expected but, as the speculative building boom gathered pace, archaeology wasn't a major concern and the only other record of Roman remains in the area is in Bygone Days. Florence Gladstone wrote of a 'trough of broken masonry' in the St John's church vicarage garden, thought to be part of a Roman sarcophagus discovered on the site of 1 Ladbroke Square. Although this could merely mean a few roadside burials outside the Londinium city limits, a 70s archaeology survey concluded that the coffins belonged to Romano-Briton residents of a villa at the top of Ladbroke Grove.

Roughler night:Whatever Happened To Mr Sawyer? Roughler TV All-Dayer

An all day event of film, music and reminiscence that will transport in time but not place. Starting with film, moving on to debate; 'What's So Great About Portobello Rd?' and ending in an orgy of music and self-indulgence.

The film fare opens with Peter Richardson's Golden Montreux winner The Strike, includes Roger Pampohrey's Who The Fuck Is Peter Docherty, and the premiere of Ben Young's. The launch of Roughler TV offers first insight on Unicley Hockey, Panto, Banksy, False Memory, etc.

After a panel discussion, the evening features bands, music and Portobello Celebrity Stars In Their Eyes.

ROUGHLER MAGAZINE

The Roughler Magazine was the house journal of a unique group of people who frequented Portobello Road in the late 80s, a group that included Keith Allen (plus kids), Joe, Mick and Paul of The Clash, Will Self, Mark Quinn, Damien Hirst, Neneh Cherry, Shane MacGowan, Elvis Costello, Jake Arnott, anyone from The Comic Strip, Vic Reeves, Davina McCall, Anna Chancellor, Kevin Allen, and anyone else who knew a good time when they saw it.

The Roughler was produced by Ray 'Roughler' Jones, it was ID meets Tatler, Sniffing Glue meets the Big Issue, and retailed for whatever you had in your pocket or quite possibly free.

Now The Roughler is risen, phoenix-like from the ashes to remind us all of an era before Richard Curtis and 'Notting Hill' brought tourist hordes and surreal house prices; when David Cameron was still at Eton; when merchant banker still meant w*r.

Subterrania: Underground rivers

The Notting Hill area is defined by two streams, which both now run underground, either side of the high ground; the Kilburn/Westbourne/Bayswater stream/rivulet to the east, and Bridge or Counteris Creek to the west. According to Florence Gladstone, there's 'no foundation for the statement, occasionally met with, that a vast lake underlies the district.' However, the Westbourne is described as augmented by tributaries while the Bayswater area is noted for its springs, reservoirs, conduits and general watery features. Since the 1850s, the legendary lost London river has been conveyed through the area by culvert, no longer along its original course. It emerges across Bayswater Road to form the Serpentine in Hyde Park, the other side of which it can be seen going through Sloane Square tube station via a pipe, before joining the Thames at Chelsea Bridge.

Maybury (currently filming The Edge Of Love about Dylan Thomas with Kiera Knightley and Sienna Miller, and director of the best music video of all time Nothing Compares 2 U for Sinéad) reminiscing about their drinking days with the greatest British Artist of the 20th Century, Francis Bacon. Followed by a screening of:

Love Is The Devil (John Maybury)

90 mins 18
Maybury's debut feature is an extraordinary study of the passions that drove Bacon (Derek Jacobi), charting his turbulent and sadomasochistic homosexual relationship with George Dyer (Daniel Craig). Set in the Bohemian world of 60s Soho the film captures the decadent underworld of artists models, East End thugs and the infamous drinking den The Colony Room presided over by the hilariously foul mouthed Muriel Belcher (Tilda Swinton).

Necropolis: City of the Dead

The original weird bohemian local writer was Arthur Machen, who lived on Clarendon Road in the 1880s. A great champion of mysticism over materialism, he was also a member of the occult secret society, the Order of the Golden Dawn, who met at 36 Blythe Road in Hammersmith, along with Aleister Crowley and WB Yeats.

In his autobiography, Far Off Things, Arthur Machen recalls drifting around North Kensington and the phantasmagorical impression Kensal Green cemetery had on him

The Cemetery of All Souls necropolis was established at Kensal Green in 1832, as London's answer to Paris's Pere Lachaise. Before long, as Edward Walford put it in Old London, 'marble obelisks and urns began to rise among the cypresses in all the variety which heathen and classical allusions could suggest.' The entrance to the underworld, at the end of the ancient footpath from Kensington to Kensal Green, was originally to feature gothic Camelot style towers and a watergate from the canal. In 1889 the funeral of the writer Wilkie Collins, of The Woman in White fame, occasioned the first local case of fan mania with women in black fighting over wreaths at his graveside.

Jack-in-the-Green: Relic of tree worship in modern Europe

Bayswater in the 19th century is said to have been 'enlivened by the May Dance and the Jack O' the Green.' In The Golden Bough, JG Frazer describes the Jack-in-the-Green leaf-clad mummer as a 'relic of tree-worship in modern Europe', featuring a chimney-sweep 'encased in a pyramidal framework of wickerwork, which is covered with holly and ivy, and surmounted by a crown of flowers and ribbons. Thus arrayed he dances on May day at the head of a troop of chimney sweeps, who collect penne.'

Jack the Ripper Park

Avondale Park in Notting Dale was landscaped over the former open sewer known as 'the ocean', and named after the Duke of Clarence and Avondale. This was Albert Victor, the son and heir of the future Edward VII (then the Prince of Wales), who is now better known as the particularly weird looking Prince Eddy, the Jack the Ripper suspect who died shortly after the late 1880s Whitechapel prostitute murders (as portrayed in the Johnny Depp Masonic Ripper film, From Hell).

As the park acquired its sinister name, the Daily News of 1892 dubbed the surrounding Notting Dale slum area a 'West End Avernus', after Lake Avernus, the entrance to hell in classical mythology. Turner's painting of Lake Avernus at the mouth of the underworld was inspired by Virgil's tale of Aeneas visiting the grotto of the Sybil at Cumae in the bay of Naples. The Sybil says: 'First, take my counsel, then securely go; a mighty tree, that bears a golden bough, grows in a vale surrounded by a grove, and sacred to the queen of Stygian Jove, her netherworld no mortals can behold, till from the bough they strip the blooming gold.'

The Wasteland W10

'A rat crept softly through the vegetation, dragging its slimy belly on the bank while I was fishing in the dull canal, on a winter evening round behind the gas house, musing upon the king my brother's wreck, and on the king my father's death before him, white bodies naked on the low damp ground, and bones cast in a little low dry garret, rattled by the rats foot only, year to year, but at my back from time to time I hear the sound of horns and motors, which shall bring Sweeney to Mrs Porter in the spring. O the moon shone bright on Mrs Porter, and her daughter, they wash their feet in soda water.' TS Eliot 'The Fire Sermon' from 'The Wasteland' 1922

Notting Hill Carnival in the 1870s

In 1923 William Bull wrote in the Bayswater Chronicle of Portobello Road in the 1870s:

'Carnival time was on Saturday nights in the winter, when it was thronged like a fair... The people overflowed from the pavement so that the roadway was impassable for horse traffic which, to do it justice, never appeared. On the left-hand side (the east side) were costers' barrows, lighted by flaming naphtha lamps. In the side streets were side-shows, vendors of patent medicines, conjurers, itinerant vocalists...'

Baltic Breeze Elena Izosimva / Janna Ruzmova 25 minutes 12A
For a small country on the outskirts of the EU, Latvia enjoys a rather turbulent political life with regular meetings, public protests and publicity stunts. Witnessing the mass exodus of young Latvian migrants to the United Kingdom, the filmmaker went out to Latvia to investigate, but only to discover that there are quite few patriots left left, right and center! The filmmaker follows three young and convinced idealists taking active steps in trying to bring changes to the system. Three different approaches, from active and barely legal to pacific and moderate attempts to influence the politics in their country. Three different points of view at themselves and at times they live in. Do they have a chance to achieve something? Or will they give up the fight and immigrate to the Western Europe like tens of thousands of their peers have done already? Set in winter and early spring, as Latvia witnesses the run up to the controversial annual SS veterans march in Riga, the film highlights the harsh reality that lurks beneath the charms of the snowy Baltic capital. Notting Dale: A place of evil, mister
In the run up to the 1958 race riots, Colin MacInnes's Absolute Beginner locates the Notting Hellmouth: 'Still in the W10 bit, there's another railway, and a park with a name only Satan in all his splendour could have thought up, namely Wormwood Scrubs... a long, lean road called Latimer Road which I particularly want you to remember, because out of this road, like horrible tits dangling from a lean old sow, there hang a whole festoon of what I think must really be the sinisterest highways in our city, well, just listen to their names: Blechynden, Silchester, Walmer, Testerton and Bramley... And just where this railway is slung over the big central road that cuts across the area north to south, there's a hole, a dip, a pocket, a really unhappy valley, which, according to my learned Dad, was formerly at one time a great non-agricultural marsh. A place of evil, mister. I bet witches lived around it, and a lot still do.'

Bedknobs and Broomsticks

Often derided and dismissed as not a real Notting Hill film, Bedknobs and Broomsticks is in fact the most magical local film apart from Performance. The 1971 follow-up to Mary Poppins stars Angela Lansbury as a white witch who summons up the spirit of old England to repel the Nazi invasion. Towards this end, she retrieves the missing half of a magic book, The Spells of Astroth, from a Disneyland Portobello market with her evacuee kid charges. The search begins with the bogus professor David Tomlinson saying, 'There's only one place to get it.' Cue: Portobello Road sign and zoom in on Disneyland London set.

Confirming the film's local street cred, the novel on which Bedknobs is based was written by the grandmother of Joe Rush of the Mutoid Waste Company.

Getting The Fear

In The Ministry of Fear, Graham Greene's 5th Columnist novel filmed by Fritz Lang in 1944, the key séance scene takes place at 'Mrs Bellairs' house', which Greene describes as 'old and unrenovated standing among the To Let boards on the slopes of Campden Hill.' Spiritualism also features in Vere Hodgson's local wartime diaries Few Eggs and No Oranges, as she worked as a pre-welfare state social worker for Winifred Moyes' Christian-Spiritualist Greater World Association, which was based at 3 Lansdowne Road. Miss Moyes was a former Telegraph journalist-turned-psychic, who was believed to be a medium for the spirit guide Zodiac.

Rotting Hill

Wyndham Lewis gave such groups short shrift in his post-war book Rotting Hill: 'As to the mysticism, and its big vogue (5 lodges in 'Rotting Hill'); people troop... to sit entranced before pythoneses who bring tidings from the other side of death to enable them to turn their backs if only for a while upon life – more vile and ill-smelling daily.'

presents THE VX AUTEUR THEORY

(Tuesday 14th August 7-8pm, westbourne studios)

A top hit at the 4th Halloween Short Film Festival 2007, the VX Auteur Theory programme is a platform for new directors with strong visions and a personal hands-on approach to filmmaking. The search for this more personal film, whereby nothing is watered down or compromised by group decision, has pulled in these little gems; it's pure, it's funny, it's dark, it's a new generation of D.I.Y. Auteur! Strong films with a twisted vision and a D.I.Y get-your-own-hands-dirty premise of filmmaking, this collection is as pure, quirky, disturbing and individual as the filmmakers themselves. Camouflage With White Shirt

Stuart Pound 10 minutes 12
Most of the source footage for "Camouflage With White Shirt" is selected from "Man with a Mission", a TV documentary about Tony Blair. For the first six minutes, image and sound are cut and alternated to create a flicker effect with a rhythmic soundtrack, only snatches of it intelligible. The second part offsets Blair inspecting troops against Hugh Grant making his famous speech from "Love Actually". In the third part, Peter Mandelson's voice is heard praising Blair, against a shot of a wall in Berlin with an anti US/UK slogan painted on it in English. Art London, England

Intro 16 Aug

The Death and Resurrection of International Times

On March 11 1967, the day British psychedelia was launched with the release of Pink Floyd's debut single 'Arnold Layne', John Hopkins presented 'the Death and Resurrection of International Times' parade on Portobello – after the paper was first busted by the Obscene Publications Squad. This hippy street theatre, as relic of tree worship in mod Europe, consisted of a coffin carried on a 'rebirth journey' from the Cenotaph in Whitehall back to Notting Hill Gate on the tube, and in a procession through the market, with bongo drum accompaniment. At the end of the happening, IT was symbolically resurrected in the human form of the beatnik poet Harry Fainlight, as the Sunday Mirror came up with a 'Sacrilege at the Cenotaph' hippy shock horror story.

AMERICAN INDEPENDENT FILMS NIGHT

365 JOURS A CLICHY MONTFERMEIL (Ladj Ly) 25 mins 15

Since the start of the riots in 2005, Ladj Ly has continued to film and to bring to us today unedited images straight from the heart of the events which offer another take on the troubles and give a voice to the social actors and the local people, devoted to the riots which rocked France in October 2005. A member of the Kourtrajme - Matthieu Kossowitz and Vincent Cassell's agitprop banlieu film project - & living in the Bosquets Estate where the riots started (as a result of the electrification of 2 youths, Zyed & Bouna, in an electric transformer where they had hidden from chasing police), Ladj filmed his estate during and after the events. Simple, short, effective, this presentation is accompanied by a report devoted to the work done by 2 social workers and two short insights into the splendid 2004 'Expo 2 Rue' exhibition, as well as a handful of other bonus material (interviews, short films, etc.).

Performance

'Pleased to meet you, hope you guess my name, but whatis confusing you is the nature of my game, just as every cop is a criminal, and all the sinners saints, as heads is tails just call me Lucifer, because I'm in need of some restraint.' 'Sympathy for the Devil' Rolling Stones 1968

The Notting Hill film, defining both Heaven W11 and Notting Hell, was made in 1968 (not '98) by Donald Cammell and Nic Roeg, starring the most notorious local film address (apart from 10 Rillington Place), '81'(really 25) Powis Square. Leading the supporting cast, Mick Jagger sold his soul to satan as the jaded rock star 'Turner Purple'. As such, he basically plays himself or a Stones amalgam of himself, Keith and Brian, with traces of Michael X, Syd Barrett and Jimmy Page.

Nightmare on Southam Street: Bedazzled

In 1967 Peter Cook and Dudley Moore appear on Southam Street (of previous Absolute Beginners fame and Kelso Cochrane murder notoriety) in Stanley Donen's Bedazzled (recently re-made with Liz Hurley in the Pete Cook devil role), on or around the site of Trellick Tower. As Pete leads Dudley to his Rendezvous club/office, Dudley asks: 'Where are we? Is this hell?' Pete replies: 'Just my London headquarters.' (Pete Cook did live in Notting Hill; at 19 Denbigh Terrace, which was subsequently occupied by Richard Branson; and in Ruston Mews opposite Rillington Place.)

The Children of Albion

Emma Tennant wrote in her Burnt Diaries of Blenheim Crescent/Kensington Park Road (now more famous for the real Travel bookshop represented in Notting Hill the movie), 'indeed this corner of Notting Hill would be hard to define in a travel guide. It's possible to think of it as Albion, when Michael Horovitz walks past, or Boadicea's city, when John Michell, decoder of ancient runes and druidic circles, breezes along the pavement outside.' In Soft City, Michael Horovitz's 'Vision of Portobello' poem from The Children of Albion anthology - featuring 'screaming tricycles and melons, lettuces and ripe negroes, stripe shirt, and others proud walking' - is cited by Jonathan Raban as a prime example of Blakean hippy mysticism in 'The Magical City' chapter.

The Number of the Beast

In Peter Wollen's synopsis, 'Performance brought together Castaneda, Aleister Crowley, Escher, tantra, 'moss-encrusted caves of goblins and elves' - caves in which Jagger, as the doomed King Goblin, pirouetted and pranced with his neon wand through a bewitched court, waiting for the juggler in the basement to finish him off.' Most of this was conjured up by the writer/director Donald Cammell, who was known as Aleister Crowley's 'godson' due to his father Charles being a friend of 'the Great Beast 666', 'wickedest man in the world', etc, and the author of a book about him. Donald explained his 'interest in magic' as 'a matter of being conditioned, because I was brought up in a house where magic was real.' (In Crowleyan terms magic is always spelt with a k.)

Turner's doppelganger or 'demon brother' gangster alter ego, 'Chas' (played by James Fox), has to do a runner from his Ronnie Kray/Rachman-style boss, 'Harry Flowers', after killing his former friend 'Joey Maddocks'. As Turner invokes Chas, he describes him as 'A jongleur, the third oldest profession, you're a performer of natural magic'.

Invocation of My Demon Brother: Jimmy Page/Kenneth Anger

In the William Hughes Performance novel, Mick Jagger/Turner's house isn't in Powis Square, but on 'Melbury Terrace - up behind the Notting Hill Gate tube'.

This brings the Led Zeppelin guitarist

Jimmy Page into the frame as an influence on the Turner character. The occult rocker lived in 'the Tower House' on Melbury Road, to the south-west of Holland Park; which he bought off the hell-raiser actor Richard Harris. Melbury Road was previously renowned for Pre-Raphaelite artists, and the tower house has themed rooms including an astrology hall with the signs of the zodiac painted on the ceiling. Although he wasn't living there at the time of Performance, in the early 70s Page loaned the basement of the tower house to Kenneth Anger, the occult writer/director of Hollywood Babylon, Inauguration of the Pleasuredome, and the gay bikers on acid film Scorpio Rising.

Leo the Last

John Boorman's 1969 film Leo The Last captured the local psychogeography as successfully as Cammell and Roeg. Or succeeded in making an equally 'infuriating symbolic fantasy', as far as Halliwell was concerned. Marcel Mastroianni (from La Dolce Vita) stars as Leo, an alienated aristocrat who brings about a 'firework revolution', in which his facade house across Testerton Street (on the site of the Lancaster West Estate) is destroyed.

Their Satanic Majesties' Request

With his identity crisis complete, Fox/Jagger, as Chas/Turner, walks out of 25 Powis Square to John Lennon's awaiting Rolls, and the 60s were over - bar a bit more chanting and protesting. In the immediate aftermath, most of the film's main participants turned to hard drugs. Anita Pallenberg was accused of witchcraft, James Fox became a born-again Christian, and even Mick admits to losing it, as Cammell's Crowleyan 'Turner' persona stayed with him to Altamont. At the time of Performance, the Stones were at the height of their powers, between 'Their Satanic Majesties' Request' and 'Beggars Banquet' (featuring 'Sympathy for the Devil').

Tapestry Goes West Part 1

Caroline Catz 30 minutes 15
Barry Stilwells dream to set up a completely independent festival closer to the spirit of the Rock Festivals of the 60's and 70's than to modern ethos of financial gain is fulfilled and captured in this two parter that explores Barry's journey from club promoter and painter decorator in Camden Town to festival organiser in the wild west, collaborating with Cornish cowboys. Time Lords of the Manor: The Veres

Kensington's mystical history can be traced back to the Doomesday Book and the weird Norman lord of the manor, Aubrey de Vere. Throughout the middle ages, Aubrey's descendants were Lord Great Chamberlains of England, Earls of Oxford, and landlords of Kensington.

In Laurence Gardner's Realm of the Ring Lords, in which the Veres become mystical elf kings of Kensington, or 'the shining ones'; descended from Rainfroi de Verrieres en Forez and, through his wife Princess Melusine, the 2nd century King Ver of Caledonia, ancient Irish kings, Scythians, pharaohs, and the Lords of the Rings. Robert Vere, the 3rd Earl of Oxford, becomes merged with the outlaw Robert Fitzooth/oath/odo, better known as Robin Hood, due to being a woodlord claimant to the earldom of Huntingdon. Then there's a theory that the 16th Earl, Edward Vere, a student of John Dee, writer, poet and 'friend of the muses', was Shakespeare. 'Oberon', the King of the Fairies in A Midsummer Night's Dream, is the equivalent of Aubrey/Albrey/Alberic or Arthur, and synonymous with overlord, high/light/shining/elf or dwarf king. Peter Ackroyd seems to back up this theory, once noting how the 'self-locking' inscription on a sewer manhole cover had worn away to reveal 'elf king'.

Hassan-I-Sabbah and the Assassins

During the magic mushroom-induced mind blowing of Chas, Turner says 'Nothing is true, everything is permitted'; quoting 'the last words of the old man of the mountains' Hassan-I-Sabbah, which echo Aleister Crowley's most notorious and celebrated line, 'Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law.' Then he strums 'Come On In My Kitchen' by the blues legend Robert Johnson, who sold his soul for rock'n'roll at the crossroads. The classic Performance soundtrack includes an instrumental entitled 'Natural Magici', and 'The Hashishin' featuring the American Indian singer Buffy Sainte-Marie and Ry Cooder. This track, and Turner's accompanying potted history of Hassan-I-Sabbah and the assassins, has been dismissed by Michael Moorcock as a hippy cliché, but post 9/11 has the heaviest resonance of all the film's mystical sub-plots. There's also some Arthurian mythology in there.

Planet Alice, Motown Majic and the Wiiiija board

The Planet Alice shop at 284 Portobello Road made a tenuous acidhouse connection in the mid 80s psychedelic revival, featuring Doctor and the Medics and the Alice in Wonderland club. The Mau Mau bar at number 265 started out as the Motown Majic Company's Original Soul Bar, remembered in the 'Majic' stone in the pavement outside. The early 90s Rough Trade shop label, wiiiija, was concocted from their postcode W11 1JA, not as a goth ouija board reference.

Hello Satan, I believe it's time to go

In 1975 Jimmy Page appeared at a party thrown by the hippy socialite Sally Sparkle at the southern end of Portobello, which turned into a heavy rock jamming session, also featuring Mick Jagger, Rod Stewart, Jeff Beck, Ronnie Wood and George Butler. In due course, this caused what has to be the hippest local noise complaint of them all, followed by the least heavy Portobello police incident - in which the rock stars were politely ushered to their limos. 'Hello Satan, I believe it's time to go.'

Equinox on Holland St.

Led Zep's phenomenal success and various tragedies associated with the group, including the death of the drummer John Bonham, were attributed to a Robert Johnson-style Faustian pact. Jimmy Page was a renowned collector of Crowley manuscripts and first editions, to the extent of opening an occult bookshop named the Equinox after Crowley's magazine, which specialised in his stuff at 4 Holland Street, off Kensington Church Street.

The Loch Ness Monster, Monty Python and the Holy Grail

After Anger rented Aleister Crowley's Scottish retreat, Boleskine House on Loch Ness in 1969, Jimmy Page bought the property the following year. Whilst staying at Boleskine in the early 70s, he was filmed mountaineering for a Led Zep film in the role of the Hermit from the Tarot. Robert Plant, meanwhile, took the King Arthur role, and Led Zep co-financed Monty Python and the Holy Grail with Pink Floyd and Chrysalis. Page did come up with a satisfactory soundtrack for the 1982 film of his Melbury Road neighbour, Michael Winner, Death Wish 2. In another Performance link, John Bindon, who played the most convincing gangster, became Led Zep's security chief, or 'master assassin' in their 'private strike force' as he's described in Stephen Davis's Hammer of the Gods. As such, Bindon was playing out his own Performance sequel for real, as Chas/Turner's hitman/roadie in America.

Jimi Hendrix Experience

'In this sacred grove there grew a certain tree round which at any time of the day, and probably far into the night, a grim figure might be seen to prow. In his hand he carried a drawn sword, and he kept peering warily about him as if at every instant he expected to be set upon by an enemy. He was a priest and a murderer; and the man for whom he looked was sooner or later to murder him and hold the priesthood in his stead. Such was the rule of the sanctuary.' JG Frazer The Golden Bough 1890

'Hi,' said the newcomer. 'I'm looking for Shakey Mo. We ought to be going.' The black man stepped across the others and knelt beside Mo, feeling his heart, taking his pulse. The chick stared stupidly at him. 'Is he alright? He's Oded,' the newcomer said quietly, 'he's gone, d'you want to get a doctor or something, honey?' 'Oh, Jesus,' she said. The black man got up and walked to the door. 'Hey,' she said, 'you look just like Jimi Hendrix, you know that?' 'Sure.' 'You can't be - you're not are you? I mean, Jimi's dead.' Jimi shook his head and smiled his old smile. 'Shit, lady. They can't kill Jimi.' He laughed as he left. Michael Moorcock A Dead Singer (in memory, among others, of Smiling Mike and John the Bog) from Moorcock's Book of Martyrs 1974

Stairway to Heaven from Basing Street

To get back to Notting Hell/Heaven W11, Led Zeppelin frequented the Island studios (now Sarm West) on Basing Street. It was here in 1970 that they recorded some of their Crowley-influenced 4th album, known as 'Led Zeppelin IV', 'Untitled', 'Four Symbols' or 'The Runes album', including 'Stairway to Heaven' and Sandy Denny of Fairport Convention on 'The Battle of Evermore'. 'Stairway to Heaven' is influenced by the 1946 classic English mystical romance film, A Matter of Life and Death by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger (which was released in the US as Stairway to Heaven), and asserted mythological Celtic women. The track is also said to contain the subliminal message, 'here's to my sweet Satan.'

Lucifer Rising

After Page outbid Anger for an Aleister Crowley Book, he agreed to do the soundtrack for Anger's psychedelic diabolist film Lucifer Rising. But the pair fell out with Anger saying Page's 'attitude was contradictory to the teachings of Crowley.' Lucifer Rising starred Marianne Faithfull (when she was going out with Mick Jagger) as Lilith, 'the kabbalistic goddess of destruction', a 'female demon, probably of Babylonian origin, supposed to haunt wildernesses in stormy weather', and the Performance director Donald Cammell as Osiris, the god of the dead/after-life/resurrection; at one point, Mick Jagger was to appear in the title role.

The Samarkand Hotel

On September 18 1970, Hendrix ended up on Ladbroke Grove in the basement of 22 Lansdowne Crescent, which was then named the Samarkand Hotel after the Silk Road staging post in Uzbekistan. Lansdowne Crescent is at the top of the hill, in the centre of the Ladbroke Estate, probably on the site of a Roman villa. Having taken barbiturates earlier, he polished off a bottle of sleeping pills and was sick in his sleep. When his last girlfriend, Monika Dannemann, realised something was wrong she called round various rock personalities, and buried her dope in the garden, before calling an ambulance. According to the police report, he was alive when the ambulance arrived at Lansdowne Crescent but DOA at St Mary Abbot's hospital in South Kensington.

Dracula is Dead and Well and Living in London

In other local diabolist film links, The Satanic Rites of Dracula (originally Dracula is Dead and Well and Living in London) features actual hells angel Satanic bikers kidnapping a girl on Bard Road, off Freston Road, and a property speculating vampire. In The Omen 3 film, The Final Conflict, Lansdowne Rise stars as the location of the runaway pram scene.

The Purple Haze House and Desolation Row

In early 1967, as Erno Goldfinger said excuse me while I kiss the sky and began work on Trelick Tower, Jimi Hendrix was staying at 167 Westbourne Grove, when the property was painted purple. According to rock legend, returning from a UFO club trip one morning, the sight of the house inspired his second single. At the 1970 Isle of Wight festival, Hawkwind remember him being too depressed to jam on 'Desolation Row' but, they claim, he agreed to play Stonehenge with them.

Marc Bolan's Toadstool Studios

In 1968 Marc Bolan and June Child moved into the attic of 57 Blenheim Crescent. In their 'chateau in the west', as Marc called it, just off Ladbroke Grove down the hill from Hendrix's last residence, the Bolans lived a frugal macrobiotic existence. Marc is recalled sitting cross-legged on the floor worshipping a statue of Pan (which he called 'Poon') on the mantelpiece, studying Buddhism, and making his own Christmas cards while June sold lampshades on Portobello.

During his Tolkienesque Notting Hill hippy phase Marc's 'Toadstool studios' in a corner of the attic were frequented by the original Tyrannosaurus Rex bongo drummer Steve Peregrin Took and their MC, the DJ John Peel, who then lived up the hill on Stanley Gardens. The former (real name, Stephen Ross Porter) was re-named, 'probably at Bolan's command', after Tolkien's hobbit of the shire 'Peregrin Took', the loyal companion of 'Frodo Baggins' in The Lord of the Rings.

In the March 1969 issue of Oz magazine there's an ad for the new Middle Earth at the Royalty Theatre (the former cinema on the site of Royalty Studios) on Lancaster Road, off Ladbroke Grove; featuring gigs by Tyrannosaurus Rex, Caravan, Country Joe and the Fish, and Steppenwolf.

Portobello Headshops

Through the 70s, 305 Portobello Road was Ross Grainger's Sunflower 'alternative shop', which specialised in chillums, Kandahar shirts, incense, natural oils, Moroccan leather bags, Tibetan prints, rock posters, head books by Jack Kerouac, Herman Hess and Aleister Crowley, and studies of Buddhism, Hinduism and Taoism. In the Frenz 29 'Clasifadz' plug for 'Ross's toys and bags' at the Friends shop and the Family Dog Shop at 2 Blenheim Crescent, Ross is described as 'a sailmaker by trade' who 'specialises in real sail canvas flax, the ancient Egyptian magic material.'

Today the Portobello headshop tradition is maintained, and personified by Lee Harris and Hank of Alchemy (originally at number 253, now at 261), who had a drug paraphernalia counter-culture trial in the 90s.

Steve Peregrin Took/ Shagrat the Vagrant

As Marc went into glam rock T Rexstasy, with 'Hot Love', 'Get It On', 'Jeepster', 'Metal Guru' etc, further along the Grove, Took descended into Hell W10 heavy rock drug culture at 100 Cambridge Gardens, accompanied by Mick Farren. With their freak hair-dos growing unkempt, their snakeskin boots wearing thin and their velvet coats threadbare, the tattered troubadours Took and Farren epitomised the dissident street hippy 'freak'.

In his contemporary Revolt into Style definition, George Melly (who lived across Ladbroke Grove from Took on St Lawrence Terrace) has a freak, in this sense, as 'a strange but admirable person within the current mores of pop and (conversely) one whose appearance or behaviour especially infuriates the 'straights'. Hence also 'acid freak'. One whose excessive use of LSD or one of the new hallucinogenic drugs is considered to form the basis of his behaviour or appearance.'

In Mark Paytress's Bolan book, Took goes from 'eternally drifting along Ladbroke Grove in a Tolkienesque haze', to representing 'the darker underbelly of Ladbroke Grove alternative culture.' In his post-Tyrannosaurus Rex cosmic punk role of 'Shagrat the Vagrant', a malign orc 'dark lord of the black land' from Lord of the Rings, Took was a proto-Sid Vicious/Bez of Happy Mondays/Pete Doherty rock casualty waiting to happen. He somehow survived the 70s, but only just. On October 27 1980, whilst celebrating the arrival of his last Tyrannosaurus Rex royalties cheque, on magic mushrooms and morphine, Steve Peregrin Took choked to death on a cocktail cherry stone at 100

Cambridge Gardens. His plastic toy covered grave in Kensal Green, paid for by his fan club, maybe isn't London's answer to Jim Morrison's Pere Lachaise tomb, but now rivals Marc's Barnes Common crash site with its own website.

Quintessence: In Blissful Company

As the hippy movement went horribly wrong with the Altamont and Manson murders, to Quintessence 'things look great in Notting Hill Gate, we all sit around and meditate.' According to the 'Hippy Atrocities' Oz 25 review of their debut Island album, 'In Blissful Company', the track 'Getting it Straight in Notting Hill Gate' 'transcends a tendency towards total banality in the lyrics and achieves the status of a minor classic.'

After getting it straight in All Saints church hall with a lot of Grateful Dead-style 'collective jamming', Quintessence became known as the ultimate or worst progressive-jazz-rock-blues-Indian-cosmic-hippy group, or trance pioneers, with their own in-house guru Swami Ambikananda.

Jim Anderson had seen them 'swanning around the Grove in their robes and sandals', and was expecting 'an oriental trip at least as heavy as George Harrison's' when he met the singer, Shiva (formerly Phil) Jones, on Portobello. And he wasn't disappointed. In due course, Anderson found himself 'cross-legged on a cushion in his incense laden pad, sipping peppermint tea, slightly distracted by the Indian petit-point of the carpets and wall hangings, mesmerised by the caste mark on his forehead.'

Shiva explained Quintessence, and their take on oriental hippyness, telling him: 'Occasionally we have kirtan which is devotional singing used to invoke Krishna consciousness. It produces a state of complete relaxation and happiness. Getting audiences to join in, which we always try to do, frees their minds from fetters, makes them forget earthly matters... At the moment our sound is simple, but eastern influence is likely to grow, and we may issue an album devoted entirely to chanting, which may be more difficult to understand... The message that we are trying to put across in our music is that it is within the grasp of everyone to attain infinite knowledge, love and peace. Every track on the record reflects upon the infinite consciousness which pervades everything.' Getting It Straight In Notting Hill Gate is also the title of a short film by Joe Gannon, the Pink Floyd and Quintessence lighting whiz kid.

Blenheim Crescent Illuminati

The last issues of the underground papers, Oz, IT and Frenz, were designed by Richard Adams and Barney Bubbles at 2 Blenheim Crescent, above the hippy Dog Shop. Adams went on to found the Open Head Press with Heathcote Williams, and through the 70s they shared the upstairs offices with the Index of Possibilities, Emma Tennant's Bananas surrealist quarterly, Hasslefree Press/Knockabout Comics, the Legalise Cannabis Campaign, John Michell, Michael Moorcock, Hawkwind, Gong, Marianne Faithfull and Boss Goodman. Open Head publications have included The Fanatic proto-X-files magazine, and the programme for Ken Campbell's Illuminatus conspiracy theory fringe theatre epic, starring the Frestonian Time Bandits star David Rappaport.

The Sacred Geometry of the Great Pyramid, Stonehenge, Glastonbury and 307 Portobello Road

In 1971 the second Glastonbury Fayre was mobilised by Arabella Churchill (Winston's hippy granddaughter), whose Revelation Enterprises were next door to Frenz at 307 Portobello Road. This one featured a predominantly Notting Hill-based or associated line-up; Bowie, Bolan, Traffic,

Mighty Baby, Stacia's debut with Hawkwind, the Pink Fairies and Skin Alley; with posters by Barney Bubbles, and was filmed by Nic Roeg and David Puttnam. Frenz reported that 'Arabella Churchill put up a lot of the bread and suffered constant hassles from her family.' The origin of the Glastonbury festival and the cosmic significance of the site was explained by Andrew Kerr, as to do with sacred geometry:

'Worthy Farm is linked to Stonehenge, the Glastonbury Zodiac and the great cosmic pattern of ley lines and energy points. The whole system is a mind-bender... Sacred geometry is to do with the measurements of the Universe... all the stone circles and megalithic structures in the world are built according to sacred geometry. The freemasons who built the ancient churches and cathedrals guarded those secrets until they became obscured by establishment ritual and archaeological arrogance. These secrets are gradually being unearthed by divinely inspired men like John Michell, Keith Critchlow and Nosher.'

The Third Ear and the People Bands

In the late 60s, All Saints high church services were also given by David Bowie – during his mime phase, the Crazy World of Arthur Brown – doing 'Fire', the Edgar Broughton Band – doing 'Out Demons Out', the Third Ear Band with Tina's Light Theatre, and the People Band. The Carnival founder Rhauve Laslett recalled an All Saints happening involving Jeff Nuttall of the People Band, 'motorbikes and very scantily dressed girls riding pillion, throwing jam covered newspapers and other paint dripping missiles at the audience.'

On Westbourne Park Road, the Third Ear Band performed 'cosmic ragas' every Thursday at the Safari Tent Caribbean store at number 207 (which also hosted the early 60s Jazz club). Down Lancaster Road, in the Methodist church hall, there was 'music, poetry, theatre every Wednesday' at the Crypt folk club, featuring Jeff Nuttall's experimental jazz People Band and the Third Ear Band.

Macrobiotic Fantasia

Jonathan Raban singled out the Sams' macrobiotic healthfood store, Ceres on Portobello Road, as the most disturbing aspect of the early 70s acid Fantasia: 'The girls who drift about the store, filling wire baskets with soya beans, miso and wakame sea weed, have the dim inwardness of gaze of Elizabeth Siddall in Rosetti's 'Jenny'. In bedsitters in Ladbroke Grove, they create themselves over gas rings, feeding their immaculate insides on harmoniously balanced amounts of yin and yang foods. It is hard to tell whether their beatific expressions come from their convictions of inner virtue or from under-nourishment.'

The Sams family store first appeared as the Macrobiotic Restaurant on Campden Hill Road, with Graham Bond playing in the basement. After that you could find 'a whole universe in a bowl of brown rice' at 136 Westbourne Terrace, where Marc Bolan met Mickey Finn, while the Ceres Bakery on Freston Road was subject to Here & Now gigs. Aside from dishing up muesli, bean stew and brown rice to the hippy festival masses, the Sams family (Craig, Greg, Ann) were wholefood suppliers to the Bolans and the Lennons.

Hollyweird W11

Gillian Anderson, 'Scully' out of X-Files, was injured in a mystery fall at her flat opposite Tesco's on Portobello – The truth is out there.

Matthew Vaughn, the Notting Hill based producer of Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels, turns out not to be the son of Robert Vaughn, who played 'Napoleon Solo' in The Man from UNCLE, but of George de Vere Drummond: So he's not a new Napoleon of Notting Hill but an old lord of the manor.

Heathcote Williams, the local beatnik playwright/poet/graffiti artist etc, recently reappeared in the holy grail conspiracy thriller Revelation, along with Trelick Tower.

In another Masonic hippy local link, the 'never ending genesis' over 10 years of Peter Gabriel's £5 million townhouse off Ladbroke Square; incorporating the old freemasons' hall next door into a recording studio, meditation centre and swimming pool; caused much local anger and a court case in which Gabriel sued the builders for £1.5 million.

In breaking magical local news, Robert Pattinson, who played the schoolboy wizard Cedric Diggory in Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire, appears in the forthcoming local film How To Be.

At Mountgrange Heritage we have a reputation for going the extra mile and as an independent local estate agent believe in contributing to the community. As part of this initiative we are delighted to be sponsoring this year's Portobello Film Festival.

PORTOBELLO FILM FESTIVAL 2007 1-22 AUGUST

Portobello Magic Film Festival blazes into the Capital's consciousness on 1 August with the premiere of Award Winning Director Barney Paris-Mills' new Moroccan romantic comedy Looking for Tomorrow at Westbourne Grove Church, and a photo exhibition of Portobello stars Joe Strummer, Mina Gentry, Will Self, Paul Simonon and Keith Allen at the newly opened Craze Gallery on Portobello Rd.

The following day sees the official Launch Party at Westbourne Studios open to all featuring top magicians Richard McDougall and Paul Kieve (who does the magic for the Harry Potter films) and a special screening at 8 of Julien Temple's Joe Strummer biography The Future is Unwritten. Ken Campbell appears the same night at the Inn On The Green with an exclusive preview of his Edinburgh solo show.

Festival is all events at the Portobello Film Festival is free.

Another big celebration of Portobello culture opens at the Inn On The Green all day on Saturday 4 August with specially commissioned contributions from Jane Arnot, Don Lavis, Pete Docherty, Peter Richardson and Keith Allen curated by legendary Roughley editor Roy Jones. The same evening at Westbourne Studios sees the World Premiere of Intervention featuring Ian Hart and Andy McDowell.

Sunday 5 August at Westbourne Studios features Molly Parkin and John Murphy's reading Boozing With Bacon plus a screening of John Maybury's Love Is The Devil featuring Daniel Craig and Derek Jacobi.

On 6 and 7 August, Indian magician Aladin presents two evenings of the World Greatest Magicians including contributions from Marcus Tomlinson, N Peas and the UK premiere of controversial Indian Film Porzanto on 7 August.

On Tuesday 7 and Wednesday 8 August, Martin Robertson brings his International Ecology Film Festival – Ideas In Motion – over from Canada at Westbourne Grove Church.

On 8 August at Westbourne Studios, Nicki Kainish Barnes, Woody Allen's producer in UK, talks about working with the great man and screens the first UK showing of Allen's UK comedy Scoop.

Throughout the festival a Video Café will be running at The Inn On The Green where filmmakers can come along on the night to screen their movies. A new venue for the Portobello Film Festival this year is The Pelican on All Saints Road featuring special evenings of Spanish and London films.

Call urban director Greg Hill gives a talk on low budget filmmaking at Westbourne Studios on Thursday 9 August.

Local musical heroes Lapke from DBC, playing old school reggae and JC from The Members appear at a Punky Reggae Party at the Inn On The Green on Sunday 12 August.
